

DUNCAN L. STEWART

was born in Amsterdam, N. Y. He was graduated in 1830 and engaged in teaching in Maryland. In 1833 he was chosen Adjunct Professor of the Ancient Languages in Trinity College, Hartford, Ct.; in 1837 he took the chair of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, being the first Seabury Professor. After four years he was appointed Professor of Ancient Languages, taking entire charge of the Greek for 17 years. On his resignation in 1856 after 23 years of labor, he was made Professor Emeritus of the Greek and Latin Languages and Literature. In 1861 he received from Trinity the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. On withdrawing from the College, Prof. Stewart removed to Scottsville, N. Y., where he spent the remainder of his life in quiet retirement, and where he died Jan. 5th, 1880, at the age of 74. He married in 1847 but left no family. He was a member of the Episcopal Church. His politics were Democratic. He was a man of logical power with a keen sense of humor, an accurate scholar, a careful teacher and an exemplary christian.

DUNCAN L. STEWART, 1830, of Amsterdam, N.Y., was a member of the Adelpic Society.
AdelpicCatalogue 1830 (Died: 1880)

'30

Duncan L. Stuart, LL.D., died at his home in Scottsville, N. Y., on the 15th of January. He was adjunct Professor of Ancient Languages in Trinity College from 1833 to '37; Professor of Mathematics and Nature Philosophy from 1837 to '41; Professor of Ancient Languages from 1841 to '56. Since 1856 he has been Emeritus Professor.

C. Feb. 1880.

Duncan L. Stewart A.B. 1830

Duncan L. Stuart
(Stewart)

1830
F.B.